

OPIMUM SMUGGLER BREAKS "LAW" OF 'RING' AND IS SLAIN

Edward Hobson Pays With Life for Violating "Ethics" of Band.

HE SOLD TO CONSUMER.

Ship Steward Eliminated "Middleman" and Is Shot to Death as Result.

The "Opium Ring," responsible in the past for sudden flaring of wars between the Chinese tong and secret allies of the underworld, took the life of a man who had been violating the unwritten law of the drug dealers last night. He was Edward Hobson, an English steward on the Government Canal ship Ancon, three men shot him dead in the hallway of a tenement at No. 484 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street.

The only clue to the murderers is the vague description given the police by Leon Hobson, the sixteen-year-old brother and confederate in the opium smuggling game of the victim. Just as he was blackjacked from behind by one of the trio that had led both young men to the spot appointed for their execution, Leon Hobson heard the shots that killed his brother. Nine shots of the forbidden stuff in which the brothers were trafficking lay on the sidewalk when the police came running up.

SECOND SHOOTING AS RESULT OF OPIUM FEUD.

The tale that lies behind the killing of Hobson carries from Panama City to New York, and its ramifications are such that even the Federal agents are baffled in their efforts to find a loose thread in the skein. Only two years ago, when certain slant-eyed merchants of Chinatown attempted to do the thing which Hobson was slain last night, they peeped through the crooked streets of Chatham Square, and Charley Brown, one of the snappers of the yellow triangle, went to jail.

TESTIMONY OF CHILDREN FAILS TO WIN HER DIVORCE.

Court Decides Neither Mrs. Arrow-smith Nor Her Husband Is Entitled to a Decree.

Neither James Lawrence Arrowsmith, a prosperous automobile manufacturer, nor his attractive young wife, Hattie Adelaide Arrowsmith, is entitled to a divorce, Justice Hendrick decided today. The Arrowsmith dual divorce trial attracted wide attention because of the testimony given against their father by the Arrowsmiths' two beautiful children, Eleanor, aged eleven years, and Mildred, aged eight years. The wife alleged her husband's fondness for her maid had diverted his love for his wife and children. The children testified they had seen their father carry the maid downstairs in his arms.

Arrowsmith maintained his wife and John H. Mortimer, a cafe proprietor, were accustomed to meet in an upstairs apartment, where Mrs. Arrowsmith lived after her separation from her husband in Plainfield, N. J. Mortimer vigorously denied Arrowsmith's charges, and the maid made denials of Mrs. Arrowsmith's allegations.

Fencing Master Killed Two Wives,
Tried to Poison Third, Say Police.

BERLIN, April 16.—Karl Kopf, a fencing master prominent in sporting circles here, has been arrested at Frankfurt-on-the-Main on the charge of having killed his first two wives and of trying to poison the third one. It is alleged the crimes were committed to get big insurance.

A search of the house where Kopf lived resulted in the discovery of deadly drugs, cholera, typhus and other bacilli, chemical apparatus and medical books.
